THE GHOST THAT JIM SAW.

(KANSAS PACIFIC RAILWAY, —1873.

"Why, as to that," said the engineer
"Ghosts ain't things we are apt to fear,
Spirits don't 'bother with levers much,
And ha'nt-evasives don't take to such;
And as for Jim
What makes me to him
Was one night late and 'other as a whim!

"Running one night on the line, he saw
A house as plain as the morning saw
Just by the moonlit lane, and thence
Came a drunken man, with no more sense
Than to step on the rail,
But all pale,
As Jim drove by with the mixing mail.

"Down went the patents." Steam reverse.
"Too late!" for there came a "Thump" in course,
As his fireman, here in the cab with him,
Under stares in the face of him.
And says "What now?"
Says Jim, "What now?
I've just run over a man that's now!"

"The fireman stares at Jim. They run back, but they never found house nor man.—Nary a straw was Jim amiss,
Jim turned pale, but he tried to smile
Jim on the tore,
Put mixed more,
But quicker mine than ne'er made before.

"Would you believe it? The very next night
I drove that house in the moonlight white;
Out comes the man and cross as before;
Down goes the brakes, and the rest encore—
And so, in fact,
For a month that act
Occurred, but I swore Jim was crazed sure.

"Jim!" says I, "get me secondment a year now, most,
That most of us, fast, and says, "How's your ghost?"
"Gone," says Jim "ance more, its plain,
That ghost don't bother me again;
For I've shook
That ghost when took
A vice on an eastern mine-out book:

"What's now I meet on the first trip road,
But that very house that we talked about,
And that self-same man! "Well," says I, "I guess
It's time to stop this yer foolishness."
So I skimmed on steam,
When there came a scream
From my fireman and it drove my cream

"You've seen some one yet!" Says I, "Not me!
I've been there often and that ain't no such,
And now I've proved it." Back we ran,
And I am my self but that WAS A MAN
On the rail, dead,
Smash per in the head
Now can that meanness!" "That's a Jim sane."

THE DIMENSIONS OF CATTLE, &c.

The first annual report volume of Forster's Agricultural gives some curious facts, which seem to show that Queen's recognition points in Cincinnati asset her Walter Savage Landor as "an immense Cleaksmoke," and made rough Lint mask-grade as Caroline Skirmore. This caricature was so exact that Emerson persuaded him to soften it, and to change the first name from Caroline to Mary. Although what was latter by hunt by the name of Emerson. Miss Nowember was to see from a lady friend, who considered the first to be correct. The word knows, and is sorry to say, that Mr. Peabody's own letter served as the model for Wilkins Micawber. Mr. Forster gives some Many of the sayings of the great Dickens: "I am about to proceed to Paris to consolidate Augustus' remains. The Supreme Being must be an entirely different individual from what we have every reason to believe him, if he would care in the least for the society of your relations." The word has not since been known that Dickens' mother was used as a term of familiar affection because Mrs. Nickleby. "Nothing could be worse than this." Those who hear the great novelist read while in his country, despite their enjoyment, have almost regretted an evening that has made them think Dickens as a man with a flower garden in his button hole, and with two grim, gore chasms on her across a purple vet waistcoat. It is unfortunate that we shall never have to remember him as the man who caricatured his own chapter. Chicago Tribune.

THE CONFESSION.

It is now asserted, that the cholera which appeared in the southwest last season was of an entirely new type, and that it has never been seen in any country but this. We are the most inventive people on earth. When we do have a disease we get up a new variety of our own and confine it to ourselves. There is Snow, for instance. He has invented a new cotton which is warranted to grow again in any climate and to turn worse than our cottons of the ordinary kind. Mr. Snow has taken out a patent for the invention, and none are genuine unless they have the trade-mark stamped on them. In introducing this article to the public we may with confidence assert that no man will wants a cotton which is nice in good, solid earnest, which will last a rough ahead for months at a time, can afford to neglect Mr. Snow. He makes them of all sizes from that of a cotton cloud to that of a cotton box. The Snow cotton is certain to take the prize at the Centennial Exposition. One cotton placed on the foot of the probabilities in Washington would enable him to tell with certainty when it is going to rain in Peru.—Max Adeler.

SHERMAN ON THE FREIGHT TRAFFIC.

The general is an odd genius, yet a great favorite with the old and young. He is extravagant in his love of dancing, and some one with a benevolence of never sits lower than the back of a chair, nor higher than the chance erect. He is thoroughly ungraceful, but enters into the pastime with such real genuine and earnest enjoyment that no one can excuse his waltzing in a way that one's brain, or in the delight of his delight carrying the greater portion of one's prettiest bounce all way across the room, or in the Lancers, for instance, persistently going the wrong way in the grand chain, thereby causing the most augustic confusion and the entanglement of his lower proportions in the surrounding Spanish, drapery of the ladies. His wife and daughters disapprove of round dancing, and he one can talk to me: "I wish we had dancing at our house—I like to see young people scooting around."—Cincinnati Gazette.

There is an old story of St. Peter, when revisiting earth, was obliged to make numerous changes on every hand, to have a guide through most of Europe, but on entering Spain he dismissed him; for there, as the Saint, everything is as it was.

MEETING A FUTURE EMPEROR.

"To-day," writes a correspondent of the Paris Belge, "I had an interview with the Crown Prince Frederick William of Germany, at his palace in this city. There is one great thing about the Hohenzollerns. With a fair reputation for prudence and haughtiness, they are probably the most accessible of all European princes. Ten years ago it took me five days, and infinite trouble, to obtain a five minutes' audience of the King of Hanover; and this morning, when I went to the palace of the crown-prince, merely to ask one of his aides when I could see his imperial highness, I was admitted to the presence of the victor of Weissenburg, Wœrth, and many other battles in less than ten minutes. I stated my application to a young lieutenant, who very politely promised to inform the prince at once of what was here. He immediately came back, and, motioning to me to follow him, ushered me, after passing through two or three small ante-rooms, into a large, well-lighted apartment, with four windows looking out upon a small garden. On the divan, between the two middle windows sat the man who, ere long, is destined to place the Prussian crown of Germany on his head. The portrait of the bride as seen publicly so often that everybody knows it is familiar with its features; and yet, as I entered, we both experienced a certain surprise before one another's faces, which was evidently caused by the want of resemblance between the features and those represented in the pictorial shapes ever since his fiancée became mentioned. The German prince is certainly not handsome, yet he speaks very rapidly, and even his slight defect in utterance lends his conversation a peculiar charm.

"I had come to ask if he would visit Liege next May, and attend the Semi-Centennial festival, to which he had been invited some time ago. I could not foresee any circumstance which could bear upon the question.

"'And the national festival?' he exclaimed. 'I have to go to so many! I use to stay at home as much as possible,' he added, 'and to have to kiss all my friends' cousins.'

"And then he took me, with considerable volubility, the number of times he had to travel last year, and how little time he had to devote to his family. His chief occupation was growing up very rapidly, and he needed constant looking after. He then began to sing, and spoke of his superb gun-factories, hoping to attract the attention of the crown prince, as a military man. To my surprise, he immediately changed the subject, and as he came down the steps he was talking about the architectural magnificence of Liege. 'I always admire,' he said, with considerable animation, 'the manner in which you can vie with any place on the Continent except Paris. But the Belgians rise every thing they have at home, and are most to blame for the bad reputation of their own city.'

"When I left the prince, I had formed a sufficient opinion of his character. He might, I must admit, without stopping his own acts, but my great generals or great statesmen. He is a plain, good-natured gentleman, very fond of his ease, and not by any means intoxicated by the great events of the past few years. How different he will be from his ambitious ancestors!"—Translated for Appleton's Journal.

PARIS ON NOTE.

PARIS is fleecy this season, and is willing to stand by us in our seven-per-cent. unwonted economy. This, of course, in addition to "Sea with any assurance of the coming modes; but one thing is certain for, at least, as does any one partridge so assert that pairing skirts, jeans overdress and no trimmings, with short round waists, and no ornamentation, save perhaps in the neck, are the correct style for evening. Court dresses, however, even evening except walking suits, are only to be worn in this wise. Hereafter, ladies may have a fancy dress at the most elegant salons of France; and before summer is fairly here we may expect nothing else for gas light toilette.—Horse and Society, Scribner for March.

THE EXTRAVAGANCE OF DRESS.

All the cry and lamentation about the extravagance of dress for which we hear so much in the present days, means exactly what in the feminine of the age name, the desire for equality. The insane thirst for every body appearing as like, which is at the bottom of much sorrow and not a little sin. Why, because A is rich and spends $150 on a gown, must a woman poor and has a family of children spend $100? Why, because she and probably that domestic tyrant, her husband, do not see to contemplate the personality of her looking less well dressed than A. We see this in nearly every form in which this subject is treated. The great reason is not how to dress quietly and respectably on a little, but how to dress as if you spent as much on your clothes as, at richer people's houses. Here again is the real evil of age. The spirit of shame. If you have not real jewels, do not go without, but wear sham ones; if you have not enough hair to make magnificent, wear sham till it were only to prevent the effect of no braids and enable you to "pass muster" we would not say anything, but if it is far beyond this. And so it goes on: buy cheap finery, in order to look as if you bought it at twice the value; so let us here close exchange your clothes with somebody else, have them altered, retrimmed, any thing to ring the variety. And why? We beg that a little thought may be given to this question. Surely if we appear on each given occasion in a manner as proper as suitable costume, it ought not to signify how often we may have worn the said costume before. This over-variety is one of the worst cravings of modern times; and has its origin in a modern character, the Parvenu, who, having no real position, must have a sham one, and who, having no real wealth, must have sham wealth. Hence the "Court Journal" lately might have become a governess's circular, and the Morning Post a weekly milliner's.

A very good story was told the other day after an election by one of the defeated candidates. A gentleman approached him with, "Well, Mr. ——, how do you feel?" "Well," said he, "I feel, I suppose, pretty much as Adam did." "As Adam did!" "Yes, sir, as Adam did." "How is that?" "Why," said he, "Adam was never elected by a majority, and was kicked by dogs, and so was I."

The nuns ran in some ratchmen near Big Springs, Nebraska, the other day, when "only cavalrymen under Carr, Mackenzie, Merritt, Custis, Sturgis, Lieutenant Colonel Royall, and Major Brown" were allowed to strike them. We always believed that if our cavalry on the plains were permitted to travel exclusively by rail and put up at first-class hotels every night they would exterminate the Indians in six weeks. Quincy Journal.

It is a grave mistake to accustom young people to sing exclusively "by ear," and to lead them to habits of guessing at intervals in reading vocal music. Children very readily imitate key relations up and down, but unless they be given opportunity of learning to read by correct principles. Don't make your singers under the necessity of breaking bad habits as well as of acquiring right ones.—Rev. Sam Hessen Sec.

There are several famous cows in history. The cow of Mrs. O'Leary, for instance; Mary Smith's cow; the cow that jumped over the moon. The latest historical cow is an Indiana "drummie," who died from the effect of chewing to accordion. She chewed, not the cud, but "Century," and never died because she didn't find the ten cent necessary prominently advertised by the company.—Inter-Ocean.

One of Aesop's fables is known after all. A recent writer in London Society has discovered from internal evidence that Mrs. Aesop was a Boston woman, and that she married one Talbot, a minister, and became the mother of a large family. Another old story gone.

Ong, aged eighteen years, died at Wapello, Iowa, is less in size than Tom Thumb or Commodore Nutt, but is said to be much better than Minnie Warren. She has been visiting Commodore Nutt, and has been putting on her finest to go into the New Orleans.

A wealthy Londoner of literary tendencies has just established partnerships with three of them could not be taken, as he always did, but they could have used their services well, remarks the Courier Journal, especially as they might have become governmental clerks at the next session a week.

VARIETIES.

Queen Victoria has nine children and twenty-one grandchildren.

When you bury animosity, don't set a stone over its grave.

A number of bibles were among the presents to the Grand Duchess Anna.

General Sherman never had a cook-stove named after him until this year.

Owing to the continued efforts of the Paris Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals bull-fights have been stopped in France.

I want to exactly what the matter of me is, but I am a mess just a dozen shy of the women who wears her hair short.—Josh Billings.

Bret Harte's last effort poem, "The Ghost that Jim Saw," is said to have been founded on a veritable incident, which occurred almost exactly as related in the verse.

It is an honor to woman that not a dollar has ever been missing from the department of the Comptroller of the Currency, where women are exclusive employed as clerks.

The original patent for metal tips for shoe strings was sold for $100, and the company which bought it became wealthy. Now, upon its expiration, the inventor has obtained its renewal, and compels the company to pay him $50,000.

The faculty of American for public speaking strikes Charles Sings very forcibly. He says he heard last week half a dozen after dinner speeches thrown off upon the spur of the moment that he would have heard in England in twelve months.

A New Bedford paper tells a story about a shoemaker, who advised a lady customer to buy two mohair switches instead of one, as the article was becoming scarce. He said that the man whom he had hired to hunt moles had only caught two within a fortnight.

The Detroit police, warned by several recent casualties, have issued a notice to persons, requesting them, when they fall in danger of drowning, to seize hold by the dress, and not by the hair, which sometimes remains in their grasp.

A young Boston man was thanked for the man who dangled beneath the ice and saved a boy from drowning in that State recently, some days reward with the lady's name. If that man ace it she'll reward, and half the unmarried women in Massachusetts will be under the ice with their hair twenty rods. Fun's Comic Journal.

The Empress of Germany is one of the most simply dressed of women, except on occasions of ceremony. Her every day dresses are said to be less than those of the wives of many of the merchants. She drives out in a calico dress. And the Princess Bismarck, rest and come, though past sixty, superintends her farm work, goes about the house with a great bunch of keys at her girdle, and her house is full with knitted quilts and such, the evidence of her skill and industry.

A narrow-minded Baptist preacher has characterized the religious sects in New Jersey as "The Methodists go out into the wilderness and new countries and blaze the trees for the Baptists to come along after them and cut out roads for wagons and carts. When macadamized turnpikes are made, you will see the sturdy old Presbyterians come jumping along in their buggies and carriages; but after you hear the steam whistle sounding over the railroads, then you may look out for the dignified Episcopalians, a-running round and looking about the church, and succession, and ordination, and all such stuff as that, as if there had never been any church or religion until they got there."

The Yankee propensity to "fix" everything as well as virtue, ugliness of features as well as awkwardness of manners, was finely illustrated by Wendell Phillips, several years ago, in one of his lectures. A certain "down-easter," wishing to describe the wickedness of a whole community of his brother Downeasters, said they were so thievish that they did not care to have their stone walls out of sight. Another good specimen of the Yankee is put on record as given by James Russell Lowell. He was once so steeped in Calvinism, and on asking the wife a man if the ills were as steep as the other side, he was told that they were so awful steep that children learning to walk could not go down hill without the breeching on.

THE NEWS OF THE DAY.

The new Lincoln Law was read in the Council Chamber, and is said to be a good one.

A somewhat careful perusal of the Gazette leaves the impression that the Council will be unanimously in favor of the Lincoln Law.

Some of the Council are in favor of enforcing the Lincoln Law, and others are not. Some are in favor of enforcing it in part, and others are not. Some are in favor of enforcing it in full, and others are not. Some are in favor of enforcing it in part, and others are not. Some are in favor of enforcing it in full, and others are not.

The Council will meet in regular session this evening, and will probably enforce the Lincoln Law in full.

The Council will meet in regular session this evening, and will probably enforce the Lincoln Law in part

WOOL-GROWERS' ASSOCIATION.

An adjourned meeting of the above Association was held at Colorado Springs, on Tuesday last, Mr. D. C. Martin President, in the chair. The minutes of the last meeting were read, and letters from Dr. Collier, Dr. Colyer, Mr. Robinson, and Messrs. Palmer & Stone.

The committee on By-Laws reported, and after some slight alterations, their draft was adopted, as follows:

ARTICLES OF THE WOOL GROWERS' ASSOCIATION OF COLORADO.

ARTICLE I.

SECTION 1. This Association shall be known as the Colorado Wool Growers' Association.

ARTICLE II.

SECTION 1. The officers of this Association shall be a President, two Vice-Presidents, a Secretary, and a Treasurer.

SEC. 2. The officers of this Association shall constitute a Board of Directors who shall serve for one year.

SEC. 3. The officers of this Association shall be elected by the same office the year immediately following the one in which elected.

SEC. 4. The election of officers of this Association shall take place on the first Tuesday of March of each year.

SEC. 5. The officers of this Association shall receive no pay for their services, Provided, they shall be reimbursed for the expenses necessarily incurred in the transaction of its business.

ARTICLE III.

SECTION 1. All persons shall be eligible to become members of this Association, who are owners of sheep in this Territory, upon the payment of fifty cents a year.

SEC. 2. Any person may become an honorary member by a vote of two thirds of a quorum of the members.

ARTICLE IV.

SECTION 1. This Association shall meet quarterly, upon the first Tuesdays of March, June, September and December, at Colorado Springs.

SEC. 2. This Association shall be subject to call at the instance of a majority of the board of Directors.

ARTICLE V.

SECTION 1. No person shall be entitled to the aid of this Association in the prosecution of persons or criminals, for interfering with the rights of persons or property of members of this Association, unless a member at the time of receiving such injury, except by a vote of three fourths of the members.

SEC. 2. In cases where this Association prosecutes and succeeds in recovering damages of the members of this Association, which has been destroyed by others, the party for whom they are recovered, shall reimburse this Association for the expenses incurred.

ARTICLE VI.

SECTION 1. These articles are subject to amendment or erasion by a two thirds vote of a quorum of members, such quorum to consist of two thirds of the members.

It was resolved that the present officers serve for one year.

The following resolution was introduced and unanimously passed:

Resolved, That this Association will prosecute any parties committing unprovoked assaults upon the sheep or other property of members.

The price for shearing was then discussed, and it was resolved that five cents per head is sufficient. The Secretary was instructed to correspond with parties for the purpose of securing shearers for the coming season.

Upon motion of Mr. DeCourcey it was voted to appoint a committee to negotiate the establishment of a Woolen Factory and at the same time of a Wool Scouring Establishment. The President appointed Messrs. DeCoursey, Lacey, and Arden.

Mr. Edward DeCoursey was elected an honorary member.

A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Martin of the use of his office, which he acknowledged in a humorous speech.

The meeting adjourned to the 14th of April, at 2 p.m., at which time a large number of wool growers are expected to be present, as the subject of tariff, the shearing of the coming clip, and other pertinent subjects will be discussed.

Members' books may be found at the office of D. C. Martin.

COLORADO SPRINGS DIRECTORY.

INFORMATION FOR STRANGERS.

COLORADO.

To borrow the expression of a well-known writer in the Territory of Colorado, it does not rain, but pours. Not only is the Colony now in the midst of a season of unprecedented prosperity, but every part of it bids fair to share in the general advancement. Nowhere in the mountain districts is there a more delightful region than that which lies between the 104th and 105th meridians of west longitude, being bounded on the north by Wyoming and on the south by New Mexico. Through the centre of this section, from north to south, runs the Cache la Poudre River, and the Platte River and its tributaries water the eastern portion. Here are to be found the richest agricultural lands, gold and silver, copper, coal, and iron mines in close proximity, and the finest grazing country on the face of the globe. Two railroads, the Denver Pacific and the Kansas Pacific, traverse this section, and the construction of the Pueblo and Arkansas Valley Railroad will soon be completed. Through this latter road, which runs directly south from Denver, a large extent of country will be opened to settlement, and the mineral resources of the Territory will be developed. Already the Arkansas Valley is dotted with thriving towns, and the Pueblo and Arkansas Valley Railroad Company have laid out a number of new towns on their line of road, which will undoubtedly become important points. Among these are Fountain, Security, Colorado City, Manitou, Pueblo, Boone, Cañon City, Hardscrabble, Portland, Florence, Labran, Rockdale, Parkdale, Texas Creek, Salida, Granite, Malta, Leadville, Kokomo, Dillon, Robinson, Breckenridge, Hamilton, Frisco, Dillon, Georgetown, Idaho Springs, Golden, Boulder, Longmont, Platteville, Greeley, Evans, Colorado Springs, Fountain, Pueblo
